

Who Needs an Islamic State? (second edition)

By Abdelwahab El-Affendi, with a NEW Foreword by Ziauddin Sardar

ISBN: 978-184426-481-0 (paperback, 194 pages)

Publisher: Malaysia Think Tank London

RRP: £13.95 (Introductory Offer: only £11 if purchased online, free p&p)

WITH A NEW INTRODUCTION AND A NEW FOREWORD PLUS A NEW CHAPTER "REVISITING THE DAMASCUS MODEL"

A critique of modern Islamic political thought on the 'state', this book takes the form of a three-part dialogue with the West, with Islamic tradition and with 20th-century Muslim thinkers. The author discusses the divide between Islamic values and the basic principles which guide Western political thought. He traces the development of Muslim constitutional practice and considers the current debate on the nature of and desirability for an 'Islamic state'.

In the new chapter specially authored for this second edition, Dr El-Affendi attempts to bring new insights into the nature of the Righteous Caliphate. He discusses the limitations of the Caliphate model and compares it to the 'Damascus' model. He also compares these two models with other historical models to put their problems and limitations in the wider perspectives.

"El-Affendi has a model in mind which may surprise you A confederation of democratic states based on the model of the European Union. Now that would be a caliphate that I can imagine myself living in!"

- Inayat Bunglawala, Assistant Secretary-General,
Muslim Council of Britain (MCB), July 2007

"When it was first published in 1991, Who Needs An Islamic State? was a groundbreaking text designed to kick start fresh thinking on Muslim political thought. Almost two decades later, it has lost none of its potency."

- Professor Ziauddin Sardar (January 2008)

For further information and to buy, visit:

www.my-islamic-state.com

Who Needs An Islamic State?

SECOND EDITION

Abdelwahab
El-Affendi

with a foreword by Ziauddin Sardar

For further information and to buy, visit:

www.my-islamic-state.com